

Teresa Jeter

Teresa Jeter is the Founder and CEO of the Midwest Women's Empowerment Summit, Inc. (MWES). Out of a heart that has motivated and encouraged women over the years, she decided that the next level for her life was to build a larger platform to reach more women and to share the good news that they are empowered with gifts from God to reach their destiny. Her faith in God and her audacity to take risks have opened many doors for her. From building affordable housing and working with hundreds of nonprofit organizations, to creating a line of bath and body products that have sold in retail stores in the Midwest, Ms. Jeter owes her success to God and family. She continues to challenge women to Stir Up The Gift Within. She graduated with a BS in Environmental Science and Health from Indiana University and a Master's degree in Urban & Regional Planning from Ball State University. She will complete her doctoral degree in Nonprofit Leadership and Development in 2014 from Walden University. She is the mother of one daughter, Talia Jeter who is also a member of the MWES board of directors.
